ON THE COVER

A Salute to the King

RAMESH NYBERG

No, not Elvis. The "king" I want to write about is a man named Joseph Wambaugh. As I sat down to start this column, I had two other ideas battling for first place as the topic for this issue, but then I saw a post about Wambaugh's passing and I sat there reflecting on his work and how much it meant to me.

I didn't discover Wambaugh until my third year in law enforcement (1982), when I read The Choirboys (published in 1975), a compelling, often hilarious journey which followed a uniform squad of officers in the LAPD. His characters were remarkably colorful, from the goofy "Whaddaya Mean" Dean, to the nasty Roscoe Rules and a host of others, including one sensitive cop who took his own life after his fellow cops found out about his kinky sexual lifestyle. The stories were raw and real and the characters unforgettable. Unlike most police novels and TV dramas, Wambaugh's work portrayed police officers as people, unveiling the emotions, vulnerability and human frailties which define what it is to be human. These weren't Reed and Malloy (no offense to "Adam-12," a great show in its own right) – these were people you knew in your squads. Every police officer who read his books could find a real-life colleague who resembled one of Wambaugh's creations. It's not often that life imitates art, but "choir practice" – those afterhours drinking sprees when squad members blow off steam and de-stress – came directly from this great novel. Little did I know that, when I first picked up The Choirboys, this was his third novel, and that four others – The New Centurions (1971), The Blue Knight (1972), The Black Marble (1978), and The Glitter Dome (1981) – had already enjoyed much success, spawning TV shows and movies.

After The Choirboys, my bookshelf began to fill with Wambaugh titles. Like so many of his fans, I got to know characters like the iconic Bumper Morgan (played by George Kennedy in the 1973 movie The Blue Knight), and many others, all of whom were a part of every cop I worked with, and indeed, a part of me. Of all the books I have read – Wambaugh's and those of other authors – none affected me as much as The Black Marble. I found myself laughing until my stomach hurt on one page and weeping on another. Any writer who can evoke these kinds of emotional responses from black-and-white letters on a page has achieved success and Wambaugh did it over and over again. What was the key to his storytelling prowess?

"All I did was turn things around," he told The San Diego Union-Tribune in 2019. "Instead of writing about how cops worked the job, I wrote about how the job worked on the cops."

Wambaugh's stories generated the fertile ground for more explorative police dramas in the entertainment media. Almost all of his novels ended up on the silver screen, with The Glitter Dome, starring James Garner and John Lithgow, being the most recognizable. Joseph Wambaugh loved to turn his razor-sharp wit to Southern California's wealthy elite, even after he had become a celebrity himself. His series of Hollywood Station novels, written from 2006 to 2012, encompassed five more titles, all satirical treatments of police encounters with the ultra-rich and their lavish, entitled lifestyles. On the other side of the spectrum, Wambaugh wrote about the gritty, dark corners of LA's worst neighborhoods and gave the reader a stark tour of the pimps, hustlers and addicts who roamed its streets. The Onion Field was perhaps his most somber work, telling the true story of the kidnapping and murder of LAPD Officer Ian Campbell in 1973. This was his first foray into nonfiction and it is a hard-hitting one indeed. Another highly acclaimed nonfiction work is The Blooding (1989), a riveting account of the world's first-ever use of DNA to convict a suspect after two young girls were murdered in Leicester, England.

Being a cop and a big reader, Wambaugh launched my interest in other police novelists like William Caunitz and a couple of others, some (like Caunitz) former cops as well. None of them, however, measured up to Wambaugh's storytelling abilities. Most of the novelists without police backgrounds had so many procedural errors in their stories that I never finished the books. Only one non-police novelist hit the mark and that was Nelson DeMille. His NYPD detective, John Corey, was, and still is, one of my favorite fictional characters in police novels. DeMille is a remarkable author, but Wambaugh must be credited with being a groundbreaker in the way he peeled back the uniform to reveal the human side of policing and the toll it often takes on its practitioners. He left behind in his wake the stiff, stoic stereotypes of Sgt. Joe Friday, Reed and Malloy, and Lt. Mike Stone (TV's "The Streets of San Francisco") and paved the way for deeper, more intricate and personal Hollywood treatments of police work such as "Hill Street Blues" and "NYPD Blue."

Joseph Wambaugh's books were like a comfort, a confirmation of the realities we all face on the job. When I read them, I felt like I was at "choir practice" with my buddies, or maybe confessing my hidden emotions to some silent therapist. At one time or another, we have all felt bitter about the human race because we've seen the absolute worst it can do. In one scene of The Choirboys, the squad is at a park, commiserating and drinking as one of their squad members hangs onto life in the hospital after being shot that night.

"It's too bad he ran into such an asshole," says the youngest member of the squad.

His mentor and longtime street veteran replies glumly, "They're all assholes, rookie."

Other times, we find ourselves breathless with laughter at some of the crazy people we encounter on patrol or even one of our own: the clumsy, bumbling character who is always messing something up (you know the one). Regardless, there is familiarity and I find it poignant, funny and somehow comforting. It's always good to know there are others like us, that we have an understanding. The effects of Wambaugh's books had a profound impact on me even later in my life; there is little doubt in my mind now that his writing opened the door for me to realize that I, too, can – and should – write stories about police work as well. In Los Angeles; Miami; or Hobbs, New Mexico, policing is essentially the same everywhere. We all experience similar arrays of human suffering, drama, hilarity, and danger. We all could be characters in one of his books and that's why his great works matter.

RIP Joseph Wambaugh,

New Publication Available – Public Safety Considerations for Automated Driving System (ADS) Deployment

Technology has advanced to the point that automatic or autonomous vehicles – self-driving cars – are a meaningful possibility for the near future. Rather than waiting until a significant number of vehicles are operating without direct human control to assess the public safety implications of such a circumstance, this publication discusses the potential benefits and drawbacks of the increasing use of this type of technology and outlines the anticipated differences in the ways law enforcement will be called upon to interact with the occupants of vehicles which have been driving themselves.

Preliminary Law Enforcement Investigation Checklist: Threat of Imminent School Violence

The Preliminary Law Enforcement Investigation Checklist is intended to assist patrol and school resource officers in asking the appropriate questions to assess for imminent risk of harm and to identify factors which may require additional resources to assist students. The first part of the checklist consists of questions designed to establish Motive, Opportunity, Means, and Intent (MOM-I), and the second focuses on assessing whether the individual being questioned is experiencing life challenges which may increase the risk of self-harm or harm to others.

This form is not diagnostic and is not intended to provide a definitive assessment of future violence or serve as a substitute for a behavioral threat assessment by a team of subject matter experts. This checklist is designated Law Enforcement Sensitive. It is not available for download and is subject to additional review prior to distribution. To request an electronic copy, please contact the COPS Office Response Center at AskCOPSRC@usdoj.gov.

Guiding Principles for School Resource Officer Programs Flyer

Local law enforcement agencies across the United States have hired School Resource Officers (SROs) nationwide to improve and preserve safety in schools, often using grants from the Office of Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS Office). This flyer outlines 13 principles to guide the COPS Office's work relating to SROs and jurisdictions choosing to implement SRO programs.

These principles should not limit communities in their consideration of the range of programs and interventions which can help improve safety on school campuses. Implementing an SRO program is a local decision and communities should consider the range of options available that best fit their needs.

Missing Persons (Second Edition) Now Available

Missing persons cases can consume a lot of police and other resources – more than is commonly realized. Moreover, in high-profile cases, police executives can feel a great deal of pressure to authorize those resources to maximize the chances of locating the person and to be seen as doing all that they can.

Missing Persons (part of the Problem-Oriented Guides for Police series) describes the problem of missing persons, reviews risk factors and poses a series of questions to help law enforcement agencies analyze their local missing persons problem. Finally, it reviews responses to the problem from evaluative research and police practice. This second edition has been revised with additional information about Missing and Murdered Indigenous Persons.

NEW GUNS AND GEAR for 2025

MIKE BOYLE

P&SN Presents Its 34th Annual Roundup Covering New Firearms and Equipment of Most Interest to Law Enforcement

Beginning in 1979, the SHOT (Shooting, Hunting and Outdoor Trade) Show has served as the launching point for new products of interest to shooting enthusiasts and outdoorsmen alike. In recent years, there has been a tremendous spike in products specifically designed for the law enforcement market and this event now includes several dedicated rooms to a broad range of equipment and accessories. Since 2010, the SHOT Show has been held at the Venetian Expo in Las Vegas, NV, and has grown so large that the adjacent Caesars Forum is also utilized. The 2025 event included over 2,850 exhibitors with 54,000 attendees. Although the show is four days in duration, it is impossible to take it all in and I have to budget my time and focus on products of interest to law enforcement officers.

From my perspective, the 2025 installment was probably the best show in several years. A sluggish economy and the COVID pandemic put a damper on things the last few years, but I sensed far more energy when walking the floor this year. While there were only a few totally new firearms to take in, variations and enhancements of existing designs were all positive steps forward. In the firearms world, GLOCK® clones, double stack 1911s, tactical lever actions, and AR-15 variants were dominant themes and many of these would strike a chord with the police. Let's take a look and see what new products have hit the market.

Benelli

For many years, Benelli has been turning out some of the best autoloading shotguns ever created. While they are wonderful machines, they are a bit pricey and some people still prefer the simplicity of a pump-action shotgun. This year, Benelli has come out with the Nova 3, the latest evolution of this enduring design.

The Nova 3 features poly-mod construction, a 14% shorter cycling stroke and an ergo-evolved diamond gripping surface. This enhanced package also includes ghost ring sights and a Picatinny rail for the mounting of optics. Both 2¾ inch and three inch shells may be utilized and the 18.5 inch barrel will not prove to be a burden in patrol vehicles. Best of all, the price is but a fraction of the premium Benelli autoloaders.

The DANIEL™H9® is equipped with a 1911-style straight pullback trigger featuring a safety blade, ensuring precise control and safe operation.

Daniel Defense

Over the years, Daniel Defense has established itself as a manufacturer of top-shelf AR-15 pattern and bolt-action rifles. At last year's show, I learned that Daniel Defense had acquired the rights to the Hudson 9mm pistol which arrived on the scene in 2017. The original Hudson was indeed a unique design, but not quite ready for prime time and quickly vanished from the scene. The new DANIEL™ H9® has corrected all of its shortcomings and is now a first-class pistol for sure.

The H9 might be described as the cross-pollination result of a 1911 and a striker-fired pistol. Straight back trigger action and grip angle are reminiscent of the classic 1911, although it is a striker-fired pistol. Unlike most other pistols of that breed, the frame is aluminum rather than polymer, although weight is a manageable 29.6 ounces. Other features include an optics mounting plate, a fiber-optic front sight and ambidextrous controls. The magazine capacity is 15 rounds.

Another new addition is the Daniel Defense PCC in 9mm which is available in pistol, carbine and SBR variations. Built around the familiar AR platform, the PCC has ambidextrous controls and is fueled by readily available, affordable CZ Scorpion® magazines. Although 5.56mm weapons remain the overwhelming choice for police applications, there is still a niche for 9mm and the PCC would be a top-tier choice.

FN® America, LLC

For years, the pattern when a new pistol comes to the market is to first make a service-size unit and, as it catches on, introduce compact and subcompact variants. As the micro pistols have come into vogue, we have witnessed the opposite effect with small pistols growing bigger. Some of the best examples include the Springfield Armory® Hellcat® and the SIG SAUER® P365 which have spawned larger versions than the original. FN has now joined the fray with introduction of the Reflex® XL.

While the original Reflex looked very much like some of the other micro pistols which have come on the market, it was indeed a cat of a different breed. Unlike the others, it is a single-action pistol with an internal hammer as opposed to striker-fired. It is still a very concealable pistol, but by upping the size, the magazine capacity can be 15 or 18 rounds rivaling that of service-size guns. High visibility tritium sights are standard and the optics-ready slide features the Shield RMSc footprint. Its Slimline accessory rail is patterned after the GLOCK 43 MOS and is compatible with the Streamlight® TLR-7® sub and Surefire XSC. The trigger trips with five pounds of rearward pressure, an improvement over many other pistols used in this role.

GLOCK

For years, GLOCK has been the 800 pound gorilla in law enforcement handguns and that brand remains the overwhelming favorite of law enforcement agencies here in the US. While not the first striker-fired, polymer frame pistol, it was the first to meet wide acceptance. GLOCK pistols are extremely reliable, rugged and cost-effective, all very important qualities when equipping a police department.

This is the first year in recent memory when GLOCK did not introduce a new pistol, but that doesn't mean they were resting on their laurels. Instead, they chose to bring a pair of other quality products to the market.

First up for consideration is the GLOCK Tactical Light II. This new LED pistol light is easily affixed to the rail of the pistol and throws 600 lumens of white light and 11,000 candela. Crafted from aluminum, the RTF surface provides for a secure grip and each set contains two touch activation elements which allow users to choose their preferred configuration.

The big news, however, is their collaboration with Aimpoint® which combines the most popular line of law enforcement pistols with a world-class red dot optic. The GLOCK x Aimpoint COA™ optic will be available from the factory for the 43X, 48, 19, 45, and 47 pistols. What is truly revolutionary is the unique, patented A-CUT™ interface which allows the optic to be mounted deeper in the slide with unrivaled durability. This low-profile design allows for easier unholstering, as well as more low-profile concealment qualities, and the red dot optic can help deliver fast and accurate target alignment. There is no doubt in my mind that this concept is going to be huge.

Heckler & Koch

The VP9 series of pistols was introduced in 2014 and has gone on to be the most popular service pistol of all time for HK. New this year is the VP9A1 F full-size pistol and the VP9A1 K which is a slightly more compact model with a four inch barrel and a shorter frame. To make an already great pistol even better, the new variants feature an improved grip frame, trigger and controls. An optics package which includes a HOLOSUN direct-mounted Solar Charging Sight (SCS) is also available from the factory.

One thing conspicuously absent from the HK line was a small micro pistol designed for discreet carry. The wait is over and I'm confident the new HK CC9 will not disappoint. Crafted in Columbus, GA, the CC9 can compete very favorably with pistols such as the GLOCK 43X and SIG SAUER P365. Personally, I don't prefer pistols with a short grip and the CC9 does in fact have a "real gun" feel to it. With a width of less than one inch and an overall length of just a tad over six inches, this new HK offering is highly concealable. The CC9 ships with ten and twelve round magazines.

MAGSMITH®

Every now and again, you stumble across a little gold nugget when you weren't even looking for it. Without question, the best new accessory I found at the 2025 SHOT Show was the revolutionary pistol magazine loader from MAGSMITH. Engineered for convenience and speed, the MAGSMITH Pistol Mag Loader can top off a high capacity magazine in less than a second.

The new MAGSMITH® allows for instant loading of up to 18 round 9mm magazines with a quick downward hand stroke, using either one or both hands.

To work the MAGSMITH loader, simply load the tray with the appropriate number of rounds. Attach the loader to the magazine and a simple downward motion fully loads the magazine in a blink of the eye. Brand-specific models are available for SIG SAUER, Beretta, GLOCK, HK, and Mec-Gar 9mm magazines.

The MAGSMITH unit is fumble-free and far easier to use than the loaders which only load a single round at a time into a magazine. From a training perspective, anything which speeds up the process and gets the troops back out on the line to shoot is a big plus. It would be especially useful on cold winter days or when working against a stiff magazine spring. Best of all, it doesn't require brute strength to operate and even users new to the game will be topping off their magazines in no time.

Mossberg®

Mossberg is widely recognized as a driving force in the creation of repeating shotguns for law enforcement. The 590® family of pump-action guns has proven extremely tough and, back on my job, one particular example I utilized in training had a round count right up there with a high mileage pistol, yet still delivered the goods. This year, Mossberg has introduced a couple of new variants to this acclaimed line of pump-actions which warrant a hard look.

The 590R and 590RM combine the proven 590 durability with a telescopic M4 style stock, ergonomic forend and ambidextrous rotary safety. The barrel is outfitted with a heat shield to protect the hands, an important quality when putting a lot of rounds downrange in training. Magpul MBUS® 3 adjustable sights are standard and an optic can be mounted on a rail on top of the receiver. The 590R features a standard tubular magazine while the 590RM is fed with a detachable ten round magazine.

ries is a big improvement over the earlier 930 and has much to offer. The 940 Pro Tactical SPX utilizes the cleaner running gas system for greater reliability and is available in durable Cerakote® finishes including OD Green, Flat Dark Earth and Black. Other frills include M-LOK® mounting points and a Vang Comp 6 shell carrier card with a VELCRO® mounting plate and a hook and loop attachment system. This shotgun is optics ready and also includes a ghost ring rear sight along with a fiber-optic front. Several different models are available including variants with five and eight shot magazine capacities and one with a HOLOSUN Micro Dot optic.

Also new to the lineup is the Mossberg 590M Breacher Professional Series, a 12-gauge, 2.75 inch pump-action which is fed from the first production shotgun double stack magazine. The compact design includes Mossberg's Aftershock bird's head grip for improved control and reduced recoil. The 590M's design enhances balance and weight distribution, making it well suited for breaching operations in close quarters.

Primary Arms

In case you haven't noticed, the red dot revolution is now in full swing and what was considered exotic technology a few short years ago is now mainstream. Today, there are a couple dozen outfits turning out pistol mounted optics, but few can stand up to the rigors of police use. Quite frankly, affixing a "hobby grade" optic to a pistol you are betting your life on is ill-advised.

Brand new from Primary Arms is the

The PLx HTX-1, from Primary Arms, features the lowest centerline of any enclosed pistol reflex, allowing it to co-witness with standard height iron sights.

PLx HTX-1, a closed emitter optic which sets the new standard. Key features include a modular chassis system which is an integral part of the optic and is compatible with almost all optics ready pistols. This eliminates the use of adapter plates and makes for a much stronger mounting connection. The PLx HTX-1 has the lowest centerline of any closed emitter optic which makes co-witnessing standard height iron sights possible.

Optically, the PLx HTX-1 is first class and delivers a crystal clear picture, yet is tough enough for patrol duty or special ops. One can select a model with a 4 MOA dot reticle or the proprietary ACSS Vulcan Dot. The fact that this high-quality optic is made in the USA makes it an even more appealing choice.

Rost Martin

Rost Martin is a relatively new player in the autopistol sweepstakes and their first entry into a very competitive market, the 9mm RM1C, proved to be a winner. This Dallas-based firm has met with a high success in building quality pistols and has now expanded their line to include a few variants.

New this year is the RM1C Comped and the RM1S in subcompact persuasion. These pistols are a striker-fired design utilizing a polymer frame which feature ambidextrous controls. Other nice touches include a hammer forged barrel, aggressive slide serrations and a light five pound trigger pull weight with a short recess. Rost Martin pistols are optics ready and also have an accessory rail for affixing a light or laser. The slide is finished in Tenifer to defeat the elements and routine wear.

Each Rost Martin RM1S comes equipped with a 12 round flush and a 15 round extended magazine.

I had a chance to examine the new RM1S which approximates the size of a GLOCK 26 and I came away impressed. Both a 12 round and an extended 15 round magazine are supplied. At a suggested MSRP of $469.00, it represents a great deal for a high-quality, made in America pistol.

Ruger®

A few weeks before the SHOT Show, the cat was out of the bag and Ruger introduced their new RXM® 9mm pistol. This pistol is a cooperative effort between Ruger and Magpul and these two firms have come up with a very solid pistol. The RXM is not Ruger's first striker-fired, polymer frame pistol, but it is by far their best.

Ruger®'s new RXM® features a removable Fire Control Insert set inside an interchangeable Magpul Enhanced Handgun Grip.

While some reports have labeled it a copy of the 3rd generation GLOCK 19, there is a little more to the picture. The most notable difference is the removable stainless steel fire control. Like the SIG SAUER P320 and the Springfield Armory Echelon™, the fire control unit is the "gun" and contains the serial number. The fire control unit is housed in the Magpul designed grip module which is superbly textured for a positive hold. The slide features a direct mount optic cut with co-witness steel sights with a front tritium insert. Fore and aft slide serrations for positive manipulation complete the package.

External dimensions are nearly identical to the GLOCK 19 and many holsters cut for that pistol will also work with the RXM. The pistol runs on a 15 round Magpul magazine and GLOCK OEM units will also work like a charm. I have not had the opportunity to run the RXM yet, but two different shooters I know reported that the trigger action was as good as, or even better than, the GLOCK. I would speculate that Ruger will enjoy a great deal of success with this pistol.

Smith & Wesson®

When I first entered the law enforcement profession, Smith & Wesson was the "king of the hill" when it came to service revolvers. As we all know, revolvers have given way to pistols and Smith & Wesson's M&P® and Shield lines have also proven to be very popular with the police. But, for off duty carry, collecting or just plain fun, there is still a demand for quality revolvers.

Smith & Wesson recently introduced a trio of old school revolvers in their Classic Line including the Model 10, Model 19 and Model 36. What sets them apart from the contemporary versions of the same models is the fact that they are blue steel with wood grips. To further sweeten the deal, they have no internal lock. I don't expect to see 21st century warriors sporting these revolvers in their duty holsters, but they do reconnect us to an earlier era of time when life was simpler.

Last year, S&W hit the jackpot with their line of Ultimate Carry revolvers which are available exclusively through Lipsey's. Original offerings included a M432/632UC in .32 H&R Magnum and M442/642UC in .38 Special. These small hideouts were a huge hit and better sights, trigger action and grips make them a perfect choice for off duty or backup carry. New additions this year include the M632UC Ti in .32 H&R Magnum with a lightweight titanium cylinder. A flyweight revolver with a six round capacity is sure to find favor. If you prefer more powerful revolvers, check out the Lipsey's exclusive M686 .357 Magnum and M629 .44 Magnum Mountain Guns.

The S&W FPC (Folding Pistol Caliber) carbine was introduced a couple of years ago and that line continues to expand. Many critics have pronounced the .40 S&W cartridge as being on life support, but I for one was happy to see a FPC variant added to the line. From a longer barrel, the .40 S&W hits as hard as the more powerful 10mm cartridge and it would be a perfect companion for my like-chambered M&P pistol. Other additions to the FPC line include a Flat Dark Earth variant and another with a green dot optic, both in 9mm.

Springfield Armory

Springfield Armory followed the traditional path by taking a pair of successful service-size pistols and chopping them down to compact dimensions. All things considered, I much prefer a compact pistol over a micro pistol for everyday carry since it offers nearly the same performance as a full-size service model.

The 1911 DS Prodigy™ Compact is now available with a shorter grip frame, with either a 3.5 inch or 4.25 inch barrel. Trimming the grip frame back just a bit enhances concealment qualities, yet these pistols boast a generous 15+1 round capacity.

The 1911 DS Prodigy™ Compact is available in 3.5 inch and 4.25 inch barrel variants, featuring a shorter grip frame and a 15 round capacity with flush-fit magazines.

Recently, I picked up an Echelon™ 4.0C and couldn't be more pleased. The Echelon is a very well-thought-out pistol with excellent ergonomics and this southpaw has grown especially fond of the ambidextrous controls. Textured indexing points, an oversize trigger guard and an adaptive grip texture add to the appeal. Metal surfaces are finished in Melonite® to defeat the elements and the tactical U-notch rear and tritium front sight with a luminescent ring are quick to pick up. The Variable Interface System with self-locking pins accommodates most popular red Springfield has expanded the Echelon™ 4.0C lineup, adding Desert Flat Dark Earth and Olive Drab Green to the original black, boosting the handgun's appeal.

Staccato

High-capacity 1911-style pistols first appeared on the market in the 1990s and proved to be an instant hit with competitive shooters. One of the prime shakers and movers of these pistols was STI Firearms who introduced the 2011 platform, a highly refined pistol which proved to be very popular. In 2020, STI evolved into Staccato and their focus changed to building first-class pistols for personal defense and law enforcement. Today, Staccato pistols are utilized by the US Marshalls Special Operations Group, LAPD Metro, Texas Rangers, and many others.

The new Staccato HD is available with a either a four or 4.5 inch barrel (shown here).

Their latest innovation is the Staccato HD, available with a either a four or 4.5 inch barrel which is fueled by an 18 round steel GLOCK pattern magazine. Make no mistake, this is a first-class duty pistol with ambidextrous control and an excellent set of AMERIGLO® sights which can also accommodate popular red dot optics. Trigger weight runs between four and five pounds which enhances hit potential. Staccato pistols have earned a reputation as being tough and reliable and they may very well be the Cadillac of carry guns.

NEW EQUIPMENT AND TECHNOLOGY

5.11® Founder's Jacket Offers Hidden Advantages

The 5.11 Founder's Jacket, the first technical blazer created in collaboration with clandestine agencies, combines the sophisticated look of a classic jacket with advanced functionality. The jacket is crafted from a stretch double-weave polyester with a DWR finish and a lining of lightweight dobby nylon for abrasion resistance. Designed to look great coming out of your home laundry, the jacket may also be professionally laundered and pressed.

Though the Founder's Jacket appears ordinary on the outside, it's equipped with extraordinary functionality, with integrated comm routing, elastic MOLLE webbing, a drop pocket, zippered internal chest pockets, two hidden key pockets, and an integrated Flex Cuff Channel. Two interior phone pockets feature 5.11's Ready Loop™ to help keep contents in place regardless of what you're doing.

Designed with a silhouette which helps prevent printing, the 5.11 Founder's Jacket creates a new standard for law enforcement professionals who need to blend in with comfort and confidence.

New Modular Design Duty Holster

Blade-Tech has recently introduced the Valor Duty Holster, designed with direct input from law enforcement and engineered to adapt seamlessly to any mission. Whether changing optics, adding a compensator, swapping out weapon-mounted lights, or removing them altogether, it's designed to keep up with evolving gear without the need for adjustments or replacements.

Combining fast draws and absolute security, the Valor Duty Holster offers three distinct retention levels. Users can choose between Level 1, Level 2 and Level 3, with a three-step retention system for maximum firearm protection.

The Valor Duty Holster accommodates virtually any duty-rated pistol red dot optic, with optional shrouds available for both open and closed emitters to ensure protection. Its intelligent design securely retains firearms with or without a weapon-mounted light, while the open bottom construction allows for the use of compensators, threaded barrels or extended slides.

Designed for both functionality and sleekness, the Valor Duty Holster provides a streamlined, low-profile fit without unnecessary bulk. It is fully Tek-Mount™ compatible, working seamlessly with the new Valor Duty Drop & Duty Loop, Safariland® UBL and other mounting systems. Additionally, users can choose from a variety of color options, including Green, Tan, Multicam, Basketweave, and more, to match their gear preferences.

Trijicon MRO® HD Patrol 1x25 Red Dot Sight

The Trijicon Miniature Rifle Optic (MRO) is a reflex-style, sealed sight intended for use on rifles, carbines and shotguns to provide fast target acquisition. It is designed to be used with both eyes open, providing the operator with maximum situational awareness. The large aperture and tapered light path maximize the viewing area in a small optic, allowing for fast target engagement – especially from nonstandard shooting positions. It also features ambidextrous brightness controls; sub-flush adjusters; advanced lens coatings; and a fully sealed, waterproof, hard anodized forged 7075-T6 housing, making the MRO an ideal mini reflex sight.

The MRO HD is optimized for use with a magnifier, with an engineered objective lens to produce a refined 2.0 MOA center dot surrounded by a 68 MOA segmented circle reticle. The ambidextrous reticle and brightness control allow the user to choose between a full reticle or center dot only.

New Scout Pro™ Thermal Monocular

FLIR has recently introduced the Scout Pro, a next generation thermal monocular designed to meet the rigorous demands of law enforcement. The Scout Pro offers outstanding situation awareness with its 32 degree field of view, allowing users to detect humans up to 500 meters (1,640 feet) away while maintaining a broad visual perspective.

The FLIR Scout Pro pairs its wide field of view with a 640 x 480 thermal resolution, providing clear, high-quality imaging. The handheld infrared monocular offers two, four, six, and eight times zoom to magnify and obtain a closer image.

The Scout Pro introduces a redesigned user interface which improves upon previous generations of FLIR monoculars. By eliminating overlaid menus and settings, it ensures a continuous, unobstructed view of the target. Paired with the Scout Pro mobile app, it offers wireless remote observation and surveillance, enabling teams to collaborate in real time through live video streaming, instant media sharing and seamless content transfers – all from a single app.

Built to operate in the toughest conditions, the compact, rugged and water-resistant IP67-rated Scout Pro is durable enough to withstand a two meter (6.5 feet) drop and use in challenging weather conditions.

New Power Flex Public Safety Uniforms

Flying Cross has introduced the Power Flex line, the latest innovation in its Flex collection. This cutting-edge Class A uniform is the first to feature all-way stretch fabric, providing law enforcement professionals with enhanced freedom of movement, similar to leading performance wear brands. This new robust stretch uniform redefines the comfort, convenience and class expected in public safety. The collection includes men's and women's long- and short-sleeve Class A and Patrol Shirts, a Class A 4-Pocket Pant and a Hidden Cargo Pocket Pant.

Made from breathable, lightweight fabric, Power Flex ensures maximum comfort and performance. The all-way stretch knit moves with the body for flexibility and ease, while wrinkle, static and odor-resistant properties enhance durability. The new ExactComfort waistband provides optimal stretch for all-day wear and the Signature Fit boosts overall appearance and style.

Before its launch, Power Flex was tested by a major metropolitan police department in the Southwest, receiving highly positive feedback for its comfort and adaptability in extreme heat. Officers praised its convenience, mobility and wearability during long shifts.

Lit Safety Vest

Flying Cross has revealed a new partnership with Don Campbell, an active-duty law enforcement officer to expand the reach of Campbell's new solution: the Lit Safety Vest.

"I designed the vest when I heard about a fellow officer who lost his life after being struck at the scene of an accident. If he couldn't be seen even when wearing a high-visibility vest, something had to change," said Campbell. "I made the Lit Safety Vest to improve safety for others working in low-visibility situations."

Utilizing built-in LED illumination technology, the vest actively emits light, dramatically increasing visibility in lowlight conditions while far surpassing the effectiveness of standard reflective vests and being up to five times brighter than other LED-style vests.

The Lit Safety Vest will be available from Flying Cross later this year. As part of the launch, a portion of proceeds from every vest sold will be donated to a charitable effort benefitting law enforcement officers who have given their lives in the line of duty.

New De-escalation Platform

The new Umarex UMX 414 has recently been introduced to the law enforcement community.

The demand for less-lethal duty solutions for routine police operations, crowd control and peacekeeping missions is constantly increasing. With the development of the less-lethal UMX 414 Platform, law enforcement can effectively neutralize threats or agitators at a variety of distances without using firearms.

The UMX 414 Platform is based on the latest compressed air technology, combined with a patent-pending technologically advanced Power Adjustment System (PAS) which ensures accuracy and constant energy at varied distances with maximum effectiveness and minimal risk of injury.

The PAS engages a laser rangefinder to make the necessary ballistic adjustments which ensure a constant downrange energy of 30 joules. The PAS means the UMX 414 can be used from five to 55 meters (5.5 to 60.1 yards). It utilizes a range of proprietary UMX Less-Lethal Projectiles (LLP) which include pepper irritant, UV marking, and impact and training rounds.

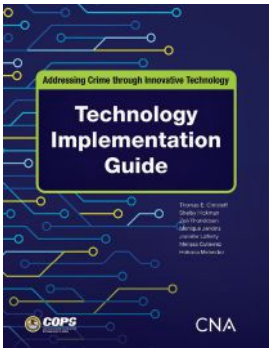
Addressing Crime through Innovative Technology: Technology Implementation Guide



In this series, CNA studied the use of emerging technologies by law enforcement agencies. Case studies examine the Chula Vista (California) Police Department's program of using Unmanned Aerial Vehicles (UAVs), more commonly known as drones; the Fairfax County (Virginia) Department of Public Safety Communications Next Generation 911 equipped communications center; the Las Vegas (Nevada) Metropolitan Police Department's Fusion Watch center and its cameras and monitoring equipment; the Pinal County (Arizona) Attorney's Office's new digital case management software for its adult diversion program; the Sacramento (California) Police Department's virtual reality training program; and the St. Louis County (Missouri) Police Department's body-worn and dashboard-mounted camera programs. This implementation guide includes a comprehensive literature review and discussion of various technology types and their real and potential uses by law enforcement agencies around the country.

Law Enforcement Suicides – Online Platform Provides Current Data on Suicides, Aims to Reduce Stigma

An FBI database established in 2021 to help prevent law enforcement suicides and increase awareness and understanding of the occurrences is now online.

The Law Enforcement Suicide Data Collection (LESDC) was recently added to the FBI's Crime Data Explorer platform, a dynamic online clearinghouse of FBI statistics and research. The collection displays the most current information about suicides and suicide attempts from participating law enforcement agencies.

Data includes circumstances surrounding law enforcement suicides and suicide attempts, general locations, demographics, occupations, and the methods used.

Last year, according to the LESDC, seven law enforcement agencies have reported nine suicides and three attempted suicides. Firearms were used in seven suicides; two were listed as "other." The collection does not collect information which identifies individuals.

Agencies can submit information to the LESDC through an online portal with CJIS (https://tinyurl.com/5n8bf4n8).

Producing a current and objective picture of law enforcement suicides may also help reduce the stigma around law enforcement seeking mental health help.

As more agencies contribute data to the LESDC and the results are published, law enforcement personnel may be encouraged that the feelings they experience are common and should no longer be perceived as a weakness.

BUSTED!

JAMES L. MCCLINTON, PH.D.

That can't look good on a résumé...

The quarterbacks coach for the Cigarroa Toros football program in Laredo, Texas, was arrested after he called police to report that a prostitute had stolen money from him. When the coach tried to pay her, she allegedly grabbed $100 and ran away. The coach, who is also a health and physical education teacher at Cigarroa High School, faced a $2,500 bond for soliciting prostitution and was released later that day. He was placed on administrative leave by the district. (He was only looking for a long-term relationship… at an hourly rate.)

He was likely a strong advocate of legalizing marinara… Emergency officials in Stoughton, Wisconsin, contacted the county public health agency after transporting five people with "possible foodborne illness exposure." The one thing which everyone shared was a visit to a local pizza joint. However, it wasn't tainted onions which sickened patrons. It turns out that a worker at the restaurant ran out of oil while making pizzas, so he visited a shared industrial kitchen nearby. The oil he grabbed was from "food-grade hemp" and contained Delta-9 cannabis, or THC – the active ingredient in marijuana. The restaurant ended up serving "60 contaminated pizzas," prompting "dozens of reports" of sickness. The restaurant was closed for deep cleaning. (It originally started with only nine pizzas, until people started eating them and then ordering more.)

Wow, they did NAZI that coming… The owners of a restaurant in Hudson, Massachusetts, were forced to close their establishment temporarily in the wake of bad judgment. It seems a group of World War II reenactors dined at the restaurant after an American Heritage Museum event. But, two of the actors were wearing Nazi uniforms which didn't sit well with the locals. A trustee of the museum called the incident "beyond thoughtless" and said the museum doesn't even allow costumes with SS collars on its grounds. "It's at a time when antisemitic violence is on the rise...that's repugnant," he said. The restaurant received threats against its workers and apologized for allowing the costumed diners. (Common sense? Nothing could be führer from the truth.)

He obviously doesn't know the old "Olly Olly oxen free" trick… It's commonly understood that, if you're wanted for criminal acts, it's a good idea to stay off social media. The Aurora and Marionville Police Department, in Lawrence County, Missouri, asked for help from the public in tracking down a person being sought, posting his name on their social media account and asking for anyone with information to come forward. So, who do you think submitted the first response to their post? None other than our wanted whiz kid who said, "Aurora and Marionville Police Department What's Up?" The police wasted no time responding and this blockhead went back and forth with them online, leading to his arrest for operating a vehicle without a valid license; three counts of resisting arrest for a felony; receiving stolen property; unlawful possession of a firearm; possession of controlled substances; and first-degree burglary. (I hope he updates his profile pic when he gets out!)

He should have called tech support… When a 33-year-old man attempted to steal a Corvette in a Miami Beach, Florida, parking garage, he encountered a little trouble – he got stuck inside the car and that is where its owner found him. "Can I get out?" the thief asked the owner, who recorded the incident on his phone. "No, you can't get out. We're calling the police." The owner said the car's security system wouldn't allow the thief to start the car or escape. "He didn't know about the manual door release under the seat," he added. The alleged thief was held on a $2,500 bond. (I've got one of the best theft protection gadgets in existence: a manual transmission.)

A real chimp off the old block?... Residents in a small South Carolina town are finding themselves in the middle of a real-life jungle adventure after 43 monkeys escaped from a research facility. The Yemassee Police Department said the primates escaped from the Alpha Genesis Primate Research Center and are believed to be in the wooded region surrounding the facility. Residents were strongly advised to keep doors and windows secured "to prevent these animals from entering homes," the police department posted. The monkeys are nonviolent, but may be growing restless due to hunger. Traps to catch the animals on the run have been set and the police department was using thermal imaging cameras to find them. This is a developing story. (Here they come, walking down the street. They get the funniest looks from everyone they meet.)

AK-47 is short for Aluminum Kan-47… "We have enough information to believe the video has caused fear to at least one student and understandably so," claims a woman who is the superintendent of Missouri's Mountain View-Birch Tree School District. "The safety and well-being of our students is our top priority." That must be why a student was suspended from Liberty Middle School in Mountain View over the video. The lad's mother was told he had to be subjected to a thorough search. The boy's mother defended him, saying that, if he'd actually made a direct threat, "he would be in a lot of trouble, not just at school, but at home." However, what the posted video of her son showed was not an actual AK-47, but an AK-47-shaped "rifle" made out of empty Dr. Pepper cans. (Loaded with high fructose corn syrup…) P&SN
